

The New World of Love

Humanity's Great Awakening and utopian future, as foretold by near-death experiences, spiritual channelings, and ancient wisdom.

Preview edition of selected sections

1st Edition, 2026

By David W. Suich

www.TheNewWorldofLove.com

Copyright © 2026 by David William Suich. All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, distributed, transmitted, stored in a retrieval system, or shared in any form or by any means—electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise—without the prior written permission of the author, except for brief quotations in reviews or scholarly works.

Dedication

This book is dedicated to my beautiful wife Lidia, my angel on this Earth whose love, encouragement, and support have enabled me to share this positive message of hope with the world. I am also deeply grateful to my friend and colleague Howard Storm, whose testimony many years ago inspired me to begin my long journey into researching near-death experiences.

Table of Contents

Preface.....	1
Introduction.....	3
Chapter 1: The Barbaric Age	7
Chapter 2: The Great Awakening	37
Chapter 3: A Quantum Leap.....	71
Chapter 4: First Contact	87
Chapter 5: Peace on Earth	111
Chapter 6: Cleaning Up	127
Chapter 7: The New Earth.....	149
Endnotes.....	167
Bibliography.....	175

“The great changes we will see with our own eyes will be stupendous. The new world of love is coming.”¹

— Santos Bonacci, Astrologer and Teacher of As Above, So Below

Preface

In my first book, God Took My Clothes, I reviewed the lessons learned from research on over 1,200 near-death experiences (NDEs). It was a relatively easy task to summarize the common insights from those who have died, visited the afterlife, and returned. The message is simple yet profound: on the other side of the veil, they are not concerned with religion, politics, sexuality, career, social status, goals, or accomplishments. They care only that we show the greatest love we can to our fellow human beings and all of nature. That's it. It's all about love.

This book presented a far greater challenge. Of the numerous near-death experience testimonies I have heard in my NDE research, only a small percentage were shown glimpses of the future. Understanding humanity's destiny required years of research and drawing from many sources—wisdom from spiritual and extraterrestrial channelers, ancient teachings, and my own psychic visions and communications with spirit guides.

What you are reading is not an infallible prediction, but a probable and likely vision of our future. The highest law of spirituality is free will, and humanity will always have the right to change direction if we so choose. So, as you read, please keep in mind that this book is only a speculative forecast based on partial information.

But one thing is clear: we will not extinguish ourselves. The game is over, and victory has been achieved. We have already passed the point of no return and are now on an unstoppable journey toward a transformed Earth—a world that, compared to our planet today, will resemble a utopian paradise. It will not be like Heaven, but compared to our world today, it will feel like Heaven on Earth. The new world of love will arrive, but how quickly that world arrives and the path we take to get there has yet to be determined.

Introduction

“There is nothing in the appearance of a caterpillar that tells you it is going to become a butterfly.”²

— R. Buckminster Fuller

It does not require great wisdom or deep awareness to recognize that we are living in a world of disharmony. We have lost our connection to one another and to nature. We see the consequences everywhere; environmental destruction, unrestrained production and consumption, poverty, depression, sickness, health crises, mental illness, and war. Loneliness has become an epidemic in our society. Most cultures have embraced an ideology of materialism as a path to happiness, and now our entire worldwide economy has become a competitive money sport that oppresses the very human beings that money was created to serve in the first place.

The middle class has been shrinking for decades as the gap between the rich and the poor continues to widen, a trend that began accelerating in the 1980's. We are poisoning our food supply with ultra-processed products and genetically modified organisms (GMOs). For over a century now, we have been contaminating our air, water, soil, and oceans. We have a seasonal hole in the ozone layer and giant patches of plastics in our oceans. One fourth of the world's population often lacks their basic necessities of food, clean water, clothing, shelter, and medical care.

After centuries of battles and two world wars, we still have not matured enough to settle our differences peacefully, often fighting each other as if we were wild animals. At the time of this writing, there are over 25 armed conflicts raging across the globe, along with countless smaller wars, terrorist attacks, insurgencies, and local battles for territorial control.

“There is a perfect plan, and it is working itself out in its perfection.” That is the message I heard repeatedly in my 18 years of near-death experience research. But if you survey the world today, it does not seem like a perfect plan. It appears the world is quickly deteriorating into a state of narcissism, chaos, anarchy, fascism, and self-destruction. If you watch the mainstream news media, it might seem reasonable to conclude that humanity is sprinting toward its own inevitable demise. Yet, as hard as this may be to believe, nothing could be further from the truth.

We have just begun to emerge from what will be known in the future as “The Barbaric Age” and are quickly moving towards a new world of love. The Great Awakening has begun and is a juggernaut that cannot be stopped. Yet profound change is rarely gentle. It is often accompanied by chaos, confusion, and suffering. History offers many examples: the American Revolution, the French Revolution, the Women's Suffrage Movement, the Civil Rights Movement, and the fall of the Berlin Wall and the collapse of the USSR. On a personal level, this process mirrors the dark night of the soul, the addict hitting rock bottom before recovery, or those who have a near-death experience and return profoundly transformed. We also have examples of chaotic times of change in the terrible twos and the teenage years—periods of our lives that few of us breezed through with ease.

The changes will not come quickly from a human perspective. Mainstream culture does not change direction like a hockey skater who can turn on a dime, but more like a cruise ship. It is going to be a long, slow, difficult transformation, with many mistakes and setbacks along the way. The dance of consciousness is always two steps forward, and one step back, and when we look around at the world today, we can clearly see that we are in the middle of a giant step back.

As these chaotic changes take place, it is important for the enlightened ones, the kind of people who are attracted to a book such as this, to keep calm, maintain peace, foster joy, and shine a light as an example to the rest of the world. It is you, your children, and your grandchildren who will help pave the way for the earthly garden paradise that awaits us—a world where there will be no more war, no more hatred, no more pain, and no more tears. The old ways will fade into a distant memory. Humanity will live with each other and with nature in peace and harmony. Children of the future will learn in school about this Barbaric Age we live in now and shake their heads in disbelief that humanity once endured such unimaginable brutality and suffering by our own actions. They will marvel that we somehow managed to pull off the greatest miracle in the history of humanity, and not only survived, but transformed and thrived.

“The first step in solving a problem is recognizing that it exists.”³

— Zig Ziglar

Let us begin by examining this Barbaric Age we are currently emerging from, and by describing the problems of this tangled mess of human society that we currently find ourselves in.

Chapter 1

The Barbaric Age

“Earth is still a dumpster fire... I’m definitely not going back”⁴
— Betty Guadagno, during her NDE from drug overdose

A Ruthless World

In 1971, Ford introduced the Pinto, a subcompact car rushed to market to compete with the growing wave of small, fuel-efficient imports from Japan. Speed to production took priority over safety. During crash testing, Ford engineers discovered a catastrophic flaw: in a rear-end collision, the Pinto’s fuel tank—mounted behind the rear axle—could rupture and ignite, turning the vehicle into a firetrap.

Engineers proposed a simple solution: a protective rubber bladder and reinforced shielding around the fuel tank that would prevent rupture. The fix was inexpensive, causing roughly a two percent increase in production cost.

However, when this proposal reached Ford’s executives, it was rejected. Instead, the company conducted a cost-benefit analysis comparing the expense of installing the safety modification with the projected cost of settling lawsuits from burn deaths and injuries. Their conclusion was chilling: it was cheaper to pay for human lives lost than to remedy the defect. The internal analysis showed that Ford could save hundreds of millions by leaving the defect uncorrected.

As a result, the Pinto remained on the road without the safety fix. More than 500 people were burned to death, and hundreds more were permanently disfigured. The Ford Pinto became one of the most infamous examples in corporate history of profit being placed above human life—a stark symbol of what happens when ethics are sacrificed for the bottom line.

This is the ruthless world we find ourselves living in today—a world in which selfishness and narcissism dominate, where people are treated as commodities to be exploited rather than as human beings to be respected. In such a system, many act solely in their own self-interest, measuring success by what they can take rather than what they contribute to society.

This mindset does not arise from wisdom or strength, but from a lingering state of survival consciousness—a psychological residue from humanity’s more primitive past, when fear, scarcity, and competition governed behavior. Though our world has advanced technologically, much of our collective thinking remains trapped in that outdated paradigm.

The Four Levels of Consciousness

There are no “levels” of consciousness any more than there are levels of height, weight, or distance. Consciousness expresses itself in an infinite variety of ways and is constantly changing. However, for the purposes of discussion and understanding, we will define four levels of consciousness as survival, common, higher, and universal.

Survival consciousness is a state of being where a person is in survival mode with no thought or consideration of anything other than his or her own survival, satisfaction, and well-being. A man operating in survival consciousness places no value on the needs of others, unless those others are a benefit to him personally. If he feels threatened, whether the threat is real or perceived, he will defend himself or attack, often using deadly force. Operating without compassion or empathy, he will take from others by deception or force, for nothing other than a moment's pleasure or to satisfy a whim.

Common signs of survival consciousness (sometimes referred to as animal consciousness) are scams, theft, violence, slavery, and war. Subtle behavioral examples of survival consciousness are cutting somebody off in traffic, price gouging, cutthroat competition, and shoplifting. I would estimate that approximately one fourth of human beings spend most of their time operating in survival consciousness, some to extreme degrees, but most in subtle forms. Survival consciousness is far more common in people who are in positions of power, as these positions attract those whose extreme states of fear motivates them to seek to control, dominate, exploit, and abuse their fellow human beings.

Common consciousness is survival consciousness modified with an agreed upon set of behaviors and laws for keeping the peace and promoting the common good. It generally includes a system of laws, cultural rules, a monetary system, and punishment for those who break the rules. This is the state of being where the majority of human beings spend most of their existence. An example of common consciousness is the golden rule— treat others as you would like to be treated. A child might take a piece of candy from the hand of another and eat it with no regret, but most adults respect the personal possessions of others. We recognize that a society with unrestrained theft would create chaos, so we learn to “behave ourselves” for the benefit of all. A society in common consciousness requires a police force to maintain the peace. The defund the police movement, a noble and benevolent concept, will only function when humanity achieves a state of higher consciousness.

Higher consciousness is a recognition and remembrance, sometimes only subconsciously, of our common connection. In my NDE research, it became clear to me that all of creation is more connected than separate. Down here on planet Earth, we have the illusion of separateness, but it is only an illusion. It is therefore impossible harm another human being without harming one's self, and one cannot help another without helping one's self. Examples of higher consciousness in our society are non-profit organizations, food banks, soup kitchens, community clean-ups, animal rescue organizations, and countless anonymous acts of kindness performed millions of times each day, mostly by older souls and beings of higher consciousness who have incarnated on Earth at this time to help facilitate our shift in consciousness. The internet is filled with stories demonstrating these selfless acts of compassion, and these acts are growing at an exponential rate. As The Great Awakening continues to unfold, people are spending more time operating in this higher consciousness. Within 50 years or so, it will become the norm.

Universal consciousness is rare and is perhaps the most difficult to describe. Although we are constantly shifting levels of consciousness throughout our lifetimes, few people spend most of their existence in universal consciousness. This consciousness is a profound awareness of our connection to each other and to all of creation. Those in universal consciousness can do no harm to anybody or anything, because they know that it harms the whole. They are constantly connected to their higher selves and the divine plan of creation, and exist in perfect flow and harmony with themselves, others, and the universe. Some examples of people who lived mostly in higher consciousness might be Jesus, Buddha, Muhammad, Gandhi, the Dalai Lama, Mother Teresa, Fred Rogers, Rumi, St. Francis of Assisi, and Lao Tzu. A person can shift to universal consciousness temporarily through deep meditation, strict spiritual practices, or through consuming entheogens such as Psilocybin, Mescaline, Ayahuasca, or Iboga. After some counseling sessions, deep meditations, and spiritual practices, I experienced this shift to universal consciousness and remained in that state for two days. During that time, colors looked brighter, the park I frequented seemed like a heavenly garden paradise, and I could not think a negative thought about anyone or anything. Sadly, I could not maintain that blissful state, but I am eternally grateful for having briefly experienced it.

“Survival consciousness creates fear, unbalance, isolationism, and single vision.”⁵

— Kryon, channeled by Lee Carroll

For most of humanity’s recorded history, the energy of fear has ruled the planet and the vast majority of human beings have existed in a state of survival consciousness. For thousands of years, the paradigm was this—you would seek out a group to attach yourself to, such as an extended family, a city, an army, or something as powerful as the Roman Empire. Then the group would make themselves as strong and powerful as possible to facilitate taking from others by force. This was considered normal and necessary at the time. The attitude was, do you want to be a victim, or do you want to survive and thrive? It is one or the other. Not surprisingly, most people chose the latter. Anyone who tried to show compassion or encourage cooperation was often quickly exploited. Although no longer the norm, this process still occurs today, as evidenced by the most powerful group on Earth, which extorts and exploits in far subtler and more insidious ways.

The Money Mafia

“It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.”⁶ – Henry Ford

Before 1913, new money in the United States was created by national banks, but they were tightly constrained by gold and government bond requirements. During that period, a strong social movement emerged to take money creation power away from the banks and return it to the people through the electoral process, with elected politicians overseeing new money creation.

In 1910, as this movement was gaining momentum, six wealthy bankers met in secret on Jekyll Island off the coast of Georgia with the goal of taking control of the world’s money supply. They drafted a private list of their own sinister objectives, along with a set of seemingly legitimate reasons that Congress should grant them exclusive authority over money creation in the United States. In 1913, they succeeded in coercing Congress into passing the Federal Reserve Act, and the people of the United States have been subject to Money Mafia’s tyranny ever since.

“The Federal Reserve is not a government agency. It is a cartel that produces money... and the product is ruling power.”

— G. Edward Griffin, author of The Creature from Jekyll Island

Most people, including those who work in the banking industry, have little understanding of where money actually comes from. It is widely assumed that when someone takes out a $50,000 loan for a new car, that money is drawn from the deposits of other bank customers. Nothing could be further from the truth. When the bank issues that loan, a bank employee creates the $50,000 out of thin air, simply by typing the number into a computer under the borrower’s account. Not a single dime of depositors’ money vanishes or is unavailable for withdrawal.

The central banks of the world operate in much the same way. They create money out of thin air, then loan it to governments of the world and charge interest. Most of the money in existence today is created through this same process. In theory, this would not be a problem, because when a loan is paid off, the created money disappears. But loans also carry interest, and the only way to obtain the additional money needed to pay that interest is through additional debt—which then generates more interest. In other words, this becomes an ever-expanding Ponzi scheme in which global debt continually grows and, by the nature of the math, can never be fully repaid.

Today, it is estimated that there are roughly $150 trillion in cash and liquid assets worldwide, while global debt has surpassed $300 trillion. This means that no matter how hard people or businesses work, some will be unable to pay their debts and will default on those loans. It is mathematically impossible to pay off all the debt in the world. Even if total debt and total cash were equal, paying off every loan would cause all money to vanish. Our system of money creation is beyond foolish.

To make matters worse, most central banks in the world—such as the Federal Reserve in the USA—are neither federal nor do they hold any meaningful reserves. They are institutions owned by private investors who control the world’s money supply and collect the value of all the money they create out of thin air through the inflationary process. Over time, the banks of the world consistently create new money at a rate that exceeds the growth of goods and services, which leads to inflation. In truth, inflation is not prices naturally rising; it is the devaluing of currency caused by excessive money creation within this deranged banking system. If the federal government, rather than the Federal Reserve, were allowed to create money, we would still experience inflation, but there would be no national debt and no need for direct taxation.

“Give a man a gun, and he can rob a bank. Give a man a bank, and he can rob the world.”

— Rip Bob Diamond

When I was a child, I could buy a hamburger, fries, and a Coke for one dollar. Today, I cannot even buy a single can of Coke for that amount. The banks of the world have stolen the value of that dollar through their unchecked money creation, causing the currency devaluation we call inflation. Through this process, the world’s banks seize more wealth each year from people than all criminals combined.

“Permit me to issue and control the money of a nation, and I care not who makes its laws.”

— Mayer Amschel Rothschild

Today's globalists—whose primary instrument of control is the worldwide system of central banks—exert overwhelming influence over business, politics, and finance. Their long-term aspirations were openly stated in 1980 on the Georgia Guidestones, carved into four 19-foot-tall granite slabs weighing 20 tons each. These goals included reducing the world population from 8 billion to 500 million, establishing a one-world court, and creating a one-world government. The globalists' ultimate goal is a world in which they stand as the pharaohs of modern times—self-appointed gods ruling over the masses who labor beneath them and serve their needs.

We see the consequences of this control woven into nearly every aspect of modern life. Three corporations—BlackRock, Vanguard, and State Street—now rank among the top shareholders of a vast number of major companies, giving them immense influence over global markets. The documentary The Lightbulb Conspiracy highlights how products are deliberately designed to fail so consumers must continually replace them. Taxes continue to rise, subscription-based services are replacing traditional ownership, and cut-throat competition has increasingly devolved into competing through cheating. Consumers are confronted with endless up-sells, hidden fees, and products intentionally engineered to be difficult or impossible to repair, ensuring a short, disposable lifespan. Long gone are the early days of smartphones, when you could remove the back cover off the phone, replace the battery in under a minute, and upgrade the memory yourself with an off-the-shelf microSD card.

Trading Freedom for Safety

Hundreds of years ago, kings ruled by “divine right,” and their subjects genuinely believed their rulers were appointed by God to govern. But in today's more enlightened and less religious world, people would no longer submit to a ruler claiming godlike authority. In response, the globalists have devised a subtler strategy that has worked flawlessly for more than a century: problem, reaction, solution. They create a problem, the public reacts by demanding government intervention, and the resulting “solution” inevitably requires citizens to surrender yet another layer of their freedom in exchange for promised protection.

“The formula never changes: manufacture a crisis, amplify fear, and then present a solution that hands over more power and control.”

—David Icke

Before we examine three examples of the problem–reaction–solution manipulation technique, let us first address the subject of conspiracies. As a power plant engineer for most of my working career, I had little patience for what I viewed as the ignorance of those who blindly embraced conspiracy theories. To me, these people were naive and uneducated, and therefore undeserving of my attention.

I remember shortly after the destruction of the Twin Towers on September 11, 2001, I overheard two men talking in the gym, saying that 9/11 must have been an inside job. I recall thinking to myself, “Are these people fools? How could anybody be so ignorant as to believe this was anything other than a terrorist attack?”

In 2007, I began my research into near-death experiences. One of the most disturbing revelations I encountered during that research was the fact that most conspiracies are either true, or originate from an element of truth. This notion shocked me, and I resisted it at first. Still, in an effort to keep an open mind, I became determined to prove to myself that this could not possibly be the case. Most conspiracies are true? Impossible!

I spent months investigating, as best I could with the resources at my disposal, many major, well-publicized conspiracy theories, including government cover-ups of UFOs, Big Pharma knowingly keeping people sick for profit, and Edward Snowden's claims of government's mass surveillance of citizens. I was dismayed by the evidence I uncovered, as it appeared to support far more conspiracy theories than I ever expected. As a result, I began to truly open my mind to the possibility that what I encountered during my research—that many conspiracies are, in fact, true.

Let us look at three examples of the problem–reaction–solution technique, assuming that these conspiracy theories are correct. I am not asserting that globalists or other malevolent forces necessarily create most crises—though in many cases, the evidence strongly suggests they do. What is undeniable is that they never let a good crisis go to waste. Each one is leveraged to consolidate power, tighten control, and drive agendas that would never be accepted under normal circumstances.

Example 1

Problem: On the morning of September 11, 2001, Americans watched in horror as the Twin Towers, a section of the Pentagon, and other buildings within the World Trade Center complex were destroyed in terrorist attacks. The news created genuine fear, shock, and a profound sense of national emergency.

Reaction: Fear took hold, and all flights were halted for 48 hours before resuming under far stricter security protocols, many of which remain in place today. People were afraid to fly, feared further terrorist attacks, and demanded action from the government.

Solution: Congress quickly passed the USA PATRIOT Act, which dramatically expanded government surveillance powers and weakened long-standing protections such as due process and the presumption of innocence for individuals merely suspected of terrorist activity. The law allowed for detention without formal charges in certain cases, reduced judicial oversight, and enabled widespread monitoring of citizens' communications and records. Had it been named more honestly, it might have been called the Freedom Reduction Act.

Example 2

Problem: Beginning in the early 2000s, low interest rates, relaxed banking regulations, and widespread fraud and greed within financial institutions fueled a massive housing boom. This was accompanied by the rapid growth of dangerous and poorly understood financial instruments, such as mortgage-backed securities and collateralized debt obligations. On September 15, 2008, the collapse of Lehman Brothers marked a critical turning point, triggering panic across global financial markets.

Reaction: The public feared a total economic collapse, mass unemployment, and the loss of investments and personal savings. In their panic, some people sold their stocks and bonds at the very bottom of the market, wiping out much of their wealth. As fear spread, the public demanded that governments intervene to prevent the catastrophic failure of the global financial system.

Solution: Governments authorized massive bailouts and emergency lending programs using public funds, while many of the institutions and individuals who had grown wealthy through corrupt financial practices, faced little to no accountability. In the aftermath, major banks became even larger and more centralized, while public debt exploded. Many of the same dangerous financial instruments that caused the financial meltdown were simply rebranded and allowed to continue, growing to an even larger scale than they were during the 2008 crisis.

Example 3

Problem: In 2019, research funded in part by the United States government—specifically gain-of-function studies intended to increase the transmissibility and lethality of viruses—was underway in Wuhan, China. The COVID-19 virus subsequently escaped from a laboratory there. Although the outbreak itself was unintentional and not part of a coordinated globalist plan according to Kryon, channeled by Lee Carroll, global elites nonetheless used the crisis to their advantage. Despite the fact that the virus increased normal annual worldwide deaths by only 15 percent and resulted in roughly one death per 1,500 people, an intense and sustained media campaign instilled widespread fear.

Reaction: People entered a state of panic, wearing masks everywhere, even when alone in their own homes and vehicles. Many isolated themselves almost entirely from social interaction. In their fear, they demanded a rapid response and a solution.

Solution: An experimental vaccine was rushed to market, and many people were compelled to take it under threat of losing their jobs. Some stores, restaurants, and other businesses required proof of vaccination for customers to enter. Small family-owned businesses were forced to shut down, while large corporations were allowed to remain open. Wealth rapidly consolidated upward, benefiting global elites. Pharmaceutical companies reported record profits, further concentrating power and financial influence, while many small businesses never recovered and larger corporations permanently increased their market share and profitability. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) publicly acknowledged that COVID-19 vaccines caused cases of myocarditis and pericarditis, particularly in young males, conditions linked to an increased risk of serious cardiac events.⁷

Hubris Meets Reality

And so today, we find ourselves racing toward an increasingly dystopian world in which our freedoms are steadily eroded as globalist powers tighten their grip, appearing to win their long-standing game of total control. But history is a graveyard of empires that believed themselves to be immortal. As the globalists grow more desperate, their escalating efforts to enforce greater control have become so extreme that they are now unwittingly accelerating their own inevitable demise. Despite their apparent dominance, they remain blind to the reality that their influence is slipping away, and their reign is coming to its end—a truth we will explore in the next chapter.

Before we move on to the next subject, it is important to note that every negative event, such as those described in the three examples above, carries a higher spiritual purpose. The COVID-19 crisis, for example, was agreed upon at a subconscious level by humanity in order to learn certain lessons. It forced many people to confront their fear of death. For others, being confined at home with their partners compelled them to either repair their dysfunctional relationships or separate so they could move forward with their lives.

The pandemic also gave Mother Earth a desperately needed breather—an opportunity to recuperate and begin recovering from the environmental damage humanity has been inflicting upon her for centuries. We saw clear evidence of this as wildlife returned to areas from which they had been absent for decades, and as air pollution decreased rapidly in many regions. Across northern India, many people reported seeing the Himalayan Mountain range clearly for the first time in 30 years.

I personally interviewed several individuals who had near-death experiences as a result of their COVID-19 infections and later felt compelled to share those experiences with others. In the perfect plan of creation, there are no coincidences; everything happens for a reason—and that reason always serves our highest good.

I want to end this section with one last, very important point. A small number of individuals came to this planet to act as whistleblowers and expose hidden truths. With the exception of those few individuals, focusing on the evils and conspiracies that have been occurring for hundreds of years serves neither ourselves nor the world. These wrongs will be exposed and addressed in their own time. Fixating on them does not help bring about world peace, nor does it help usher in the new world of love.

Too Much Cargo

“A society that measures its success by what it owns rather than what it is, will eventually lose both.”

— Erich Fromm

During and after World War II, indigenous peoples on several Pacific islands used the word “cargo” to describe the manufactured goods brought by Americans and other Allied forces—things like radios, food, tools, uniforms, and vehicles. The natives were astonished by the abundance of material possessions the soldiers carried with them.

Modern technology and mass production have delivered an unprecedented level of comfort, convenience, and luxury to the average person—amenities that would have been unattainable to kings and queens of the past. Over the last century, the size of American homes has roughly tripled, and the average household now contains approximately five times more clothing, appliances, and material possessions than those of families just 100 years ago.⁸

Advertising, an extraordinarily powerful tool for shaping and directing human behavior, is rarely used for the betterment of society. Rather than encouraging respect for the environment and compassion toward fellow human beings, animals, and nature, it is primarily employed to sell the idea of consumerism as a path to happiness, and encourage us to buy more things, whether they are needed or not. However, study after study has shown that once people’s basic needs for food, water, clothing, shelter, and medical care are met, the accumulation of additional material possessions does not increase happiness.

As a result, many people become effectively enslaved to the corporations and businesses owned by globalists, sinking ever deeper into debt in a futile attempt to acquire the possessions that society defines as symbols of success. In doing so, they become trapped in cycles of debt from which some never escape. The promise of consumerism is a vicious lie—one that society is only now beginning to awaken from, as evidenced by the growing movements toward off-grid living and minimalism, topics we will explore further in the next chapter.

A Distracted World

When I was a child, I remember calling relatives long distance and being strictly warned by my parents to keep the conversation short. A typical long-distance call cost the equivalent of about $30 per minute in today's money. These expensive phone calls, along with "snail mail" and travel, were the only ways to stay in touch with distant friends and relatives, making daily communication cost prohibitive. One might assume that modern technology and cell phones with unlimited nationwide calling plans would have made us more connected than ever, yet this has not turned out to be the case.

"Being physically present with another person is a form of love that no technology can replicate."

— Jean Vanier

Today, over 70 percent of the world's population carries a smartphone, effectively connecting them to the rest of the world. We have the ability to communicate with one another more than ever before, yet our interactions have largely devolved into emails and text messages, which often fail to convey emotional intent. The most meaningful form of communication remains face-to-face interaction. The next best option is video calls, such as Zoom or FaceTime, where we can see facial expressions and hear vocal tone, though full body language is still missing.

The third most effective form of communication is speaking by phone, something the younger generation increasingly seems to avoid. This brings us to the most common form of communication today: texting. Texting is impersonal, carries little emotional nuance, and is frequently misinterpreted. Years ago, before the era of cell phones, I would receive a dozen phone calls from friends and relatives on my birthday. This past birthday, I received many text messages, but only one phone call. Not surprisingly, loneliness has become an epidemic in our society.

We have never been more connected, yet we have never felt more alone. Technology has made communication effortless, but in doing so, it has quietly stripped away presence, depth, and human contact. Convenience has replaced intimacy, efficiency has replaced empathy, and written messages have replaced voices. In forgetting how to truly connect with one another, we have traded something essential for something easy—and the cost has been loneliness and isolation.

Politics as Usual

"Politicians are like diapers. They should be changed often and for the same reason."

— Mark Twain

The political system in the United States has become a dysfunctional catastrophe. Once dominated by two parties that, despite their differences, were capable of compromise and problem-solving, it has devolved into open hostility, intolerance, and paralysis. Today, politics follows a predictable script: the two sides engage in bitter conflict, each claiming moral superiority while portraying the other as an existential threat to freedom. When one side gains power, it ignores the will and desires of the other and governs unilaterally until the balance of power shifts again. This winner-take-all cycle of control is not democracy functioning; it is a broken system that has paralyzed the United States and stripped it of the ability to accomplish the great things it once did.

“If voting changed anything, they’d make it illegal.”

— Emma Goldman

Sadly, the Money Mafia is more involved than ever in manipulating and corrupting the political process—not only in the United States, but worldwide. The following quote comes from a well-known academic study demonstrating that the United States Congress does not represent the will of the people.

Have you ever felt like the government doesn’t really care what you think?

By Natural News Editor, March 2, 2016

Professors Martin Gilens of Princeton University and Benjamin Page of Northwestern University looked at more than 20 years’ worth of data to answer a simple question: Does the government represent the people?

Their study took data from nearly 2000 public opinion surveys and compared it to the policies that ended up becoming law. In other words, they compared what the public wanted to what the government actually did. What they found was extremely unsettling: The opinions of 90% of Americans have essentially no impact at all.

One thing that does have an influence? Money. While the opinions of the bottom 90% of income earners in America have a “statistically non-significant impact,” economic elites, business interests, and people who can afford lobbyists still carry major influence.

From taxation to national debt, education to the economy, America is struggling to address our most serious issues. Moneyed interests get what they want, and the rest of us pay the price. In the last 5 years alone, the 200 most politically active companies in the U.S. spent $5.8 billion influencing our government with lobbying and campaign contributions. Those same companies got $4.4 trillion in taxpayer support — earning a return of 750 times their investment.

It’s a vicious cycle of legalized corruption. Until it is addressed, corruption will continue to block progress on every issue.⁹

Even worse than the legal bribes politicians accept from big money is their participation in something far more troubling than insider trading—which is defined as the illegal practice of buying or selling a company’s securities based on material, nonpublic information that gives an unfair advantage over other investors.

When it comes to investing, members of Congress possess a far more powerful legal tool to enrich themselves at the public’s expense. They are permitted to trade individual stocks while simultaneously voting on legislation that directly affects the value of those same stocks. Congressional representatives, both Democrat and Republican, have achieved stock market returns that make world-class investors like Warren Buffett look like amateurs.

Dozens of Congress members outperformed the stock market in 2024.

By Richard Hall & Eric Garcia, The Independent, Jan. 13, 2025

The stock market had a record-breaking run last year, but members of Congress still managed to outperform it with their portfolios making staggering gains in industries where they wield legislative power and influence, such as tech and energy. More than 20 members made almost double the S&P500 average gain of 25 percent last year. The top five performers increased the value of their portfolio value by more than 100 percent, according to a new report.¹⁰

News—A Diet of Fear

“If you don’t read the newspaper, you’re uninformed. If you read the newspaper, you’re misinformed.”

— Mark Twain

In the early 1980s, roughly 50 different companies owned more than 90% of American media. Today, that same 90% is controlled by just six major conglomerates: Comcast, Walt Disney, 21st Century Fox, Time Warner, CBS, and Viacom. Modern mainstream news media is no longer a reliable source of unbiased information, but instead has become a tightly controlled tool used to influence public behavior and generate profit through selling fear.¹¹

If you examine any major news outlet and compare the number of negative stories to positive ones, you will find that more than 80% of news coverage is negative. When genuinely negative news is scarce, something positive or neutral is often reframed with a negative spin, because fear attracts attention and drives engagement. This frequently results in misinformation and a constant stream of negativity.

“If you are going to judge this planet by your media, you are not going to have much peace,”¹²

— Kryon, channeled by Lee Carroll

The human consciousness was not designed to absorb the negativity, drama, chaos, violence, suffering, and fear of an entire planet. Yet the news media takes the worst behaviors of eight billion people and places them directly in the front of our minds through radios, televisions, computers, and smartphone screens. In essence, modern news has become a well-crafted fear report—one that is a highly toxic poison to the human soul and body.

I once heard a Pleiadian give some excellent advice...

If you really want to evolve, do not read your newspapers, do not listen to the radio, and do not watch television. If you are able to be media-free for periods of time, and you disengage yourself from the frequency of chaos, anxiety, hustle-bustle, and temptations of all kinds that you don’t need, you begin to get clear. You begin to listen to what’s going on inside of yourself, and to live in the world and not necessarily be lost in it. You become clear. We cannot emphasize this enough.

— Pleiadian channeler

As a spiritual counselor, the advice I give to my clients is to shrink your world. I avoid the news and, much of the time, I have no idea about the details of current events. It was two months into the war between Russia and Ukraine before I even heard about it, and it was one week after the 2024 election when I overheard in public that Trump had won.

Some people have accused me of sticking my head in the sand, which is a completely valid perspective that I respect. My perspective, however, is different. Human beings are artificially increasing the size of our own “personal worlds” through technology. 500 years ago, there could have been a major war occurring just 100 miles away, and you might never have known it happened.

Shrinking our world means tuning out the rest of the world and paying attention only to our own personal world, the people we come in contact with every day, and doing our best to be loving and kind to them. I have experienced no negative consequences in my life from this strategy; rather, the opposite. I have witnessed people go into extreme states of anxiety simply from focusing on the horrors of what is going on in the world—horrors I often know nothing about. In my personal world, there is no war, no shootings, and no runaway crime. I occasionally hear secondhand about a theft or an attack, but it is rare. I do not stress over the chaos and drama of the rest of the world because, quite simply, in my own world, it is extremely rare.

Mother Earth in Crisis

“We are not separate from nature. We are part of nature, and when we destroy nature, we destroy ourselves.”
— Dr. Vandana Shiva

Perhaps one of the worst aspects of globalist control and greed is the widespread environmental devastation permitted under their watch, simply because it is not a priority to them. For over a century, we have polluted our soil, water, and air. In more recent decades, we have also contaminated our food supply with ultra-processed foods, chemicals, additives, and preservatives. Among the most serious concerns is the widespread use of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) in our food supply. According to Jeffrey M. Smith, a leading expert and researcher on GMOs, long-term consumption of GMO-based foods could have severe biological consequences, including causing sterility within three generations. Fortunately for humanity, a growing list of about 35 countries have completely banned the cultivation of genetically modified crops or substantially restricted them through national laws.

The scale of damage and stress we are inflicting on our mother Gaia is staggering. It includes ozone layer depletion, choking smog, industrial pollution, microplastic contamination of the food chain, ocean acidification, pesticide and herbicide poisoning, desertification, mass species extinction, deforestation, the collapse of pollinators, toxic waste dumping, heavy metal contamination, military-related environmental destruction, and even space debris, just to name a few.

Climate Change

I debated for some time whether to mention the environmental issue that has become the central focus of humanity: climate change. Before I make an important statement about climate change, and anybody reading this decides to stop here and dismiss the content of this book, I want to assure you that I am on the same team as those who wish to reduce carbon emissions. At the time of this writing, I drive a 2021 Nissan Leaf electric vehicle. I plant trees, recycle, repurpose, and occasionally participate in neighborhood cleanups. I have over 25 solar panels on my property, and my home is filled with high-efficiency lighting and appliances. I do these things not out of a belief that climate change will destroy the Earth, but because my near-death experience research has shown me that it is unwise to interfere with nature’s perfectly balanced design. I genuinely believe humanity should move away from burning fossil fuels as quickly as is reasonably possible, while taking care not to cause unnecessary hardship for people in the process.

In my years of near-death experience research, I heard a message repeatedly—one that took me some time to finally accept. The climate is changing, and the burning of fossil fuels is affecting that change; of this, there is no doubt. However, the message from the other side of the veil is clear—humanity is not the primary driver of Earth's long-term climate cycles, and climate change will not destroy us. The Earth's climate has been changing for millions of years, long before human beings began burning fossil fuels. Over that vast span of time, the planet has experienced at least 15 ice ages, each followed by periods of rapid warming.

“Over Earth's history, climate has shifted between extremes many times, long before humans appeared.”¹³

— NASA, Earth Observatory

For most of Earth's history, the planet was significantly warmer than it is today, by about 12.6°F on average. Evidence of drastic climate change can be seen in geological formations such as the Grand Canyon in Arizona. Contrary to popular belief, the Grand Canyon did not form slowly over millions of years, but in a relatively short period—approximately 300 years—when, at the end of an ice age, massive volumes of water flowed first in one direction and then the other.

A useful analogy in humanity's role in climate change is a large truck rolling down a hill. You could get behind the truck and push it faster, or stand in front of it and slow it down a bit, but regardless of what you do, the truck will continue rolling downhill. The information revealed through my research indicates that we are headed toward a mini-ice age—one that may cause inconveniences, but not catastrophic consequences that would pose an existential threat to humanity.

According to Kryon, the spiritual entity who describes himself as the caretaker of Earth's magnetic field, the current climatic shifts are a necessary part of a broader transformation in human consciousness now unfolding on our planet. This shift in consciousness requires a corresponding change in Earth's magnetic field, which directly influences human consciousness. As the magnetic field adjusts, changes in the climate arise as a secondary effect.

The Abuse of Animals

As a species, we share the Earth with many other animals, yet we often act as if we own the entire planet. The Earth is a gift meant to be shared by all life that inhabits it, not just human beings. Unfortunately, we are the only species that dominates, controls, and destroys nature rather than living in harmony with it.

Part of our responsibility as stewards of the Earth is to respect the design of nature. You can go down the line—avian flu, mad cow, salmonella, Pfiesteria, campylobacter, e-coli, just go down the line, and every single one of these things is nature speaking to us today, screaming to our industrialized culture saying, enough!

— Joel Salatin, Sustainable Farmer

Most advanced alien species do not kill animals for food. However, the biology of some human beings still requires the consumption of meat. As we mature spiritually, our biology will eventually evolve as well, and the day will come when all of humanity is vegan. We are not there, yet.

The first step we need to take is ensuring that animals are given a good life and treated with love and respect. We must end the practice of confining animals to small cages or crowded spaces, forcing them to live in their own urine and feces, and condemning them to miserable existences until they are slaughtered. Any animals used as food sources must never be subjected to suffering.

Animals are sentient beings with feelings and emotions and must be treated accordingly. They are our relatives, not our property. For this reason, they should always be treated with care, compassion, and dignity, and given a good life until the day they are processed for consumption. Animals who are treated with love and allowed to live healthy, natural lives provide higher-quality nutrition.

Someday, humanity will move beyond its predatory diet altogether. I am encouraged by the growing number of people choosing vegetarian and vegan lifestyles, and by meaningful changes in the food industry that reflect a deeper respect, compassion, and reverence for our animal relatives.

Violence as Entertainment

The time after my near-death experience was probably the most frustrating six months of my existence. After experiencing perfection in something so beautiful, I couldn't watch television. Any type of violence, even an old Western movie, I'd have to turn it off, because to me that was total ignorance. There was no reason on Earth to show people killing people.

— Joe Geraci, NDE from internal hemorrhaging after surgery

Violence as entertainment is a glaring and prevalent sign of the Barbaric Age. Television shows, movies, and video games are saturated with violence—fistfights, stabbings, shootings, and grotesque depictions of all kinds, especially in horror films.

According to the American Psychiatric Association, by the time they reach age 18, American children will have seen 16,000 simulated murders and 200,000 acts of violence. Media violence can be hazardous to children's health, and studies point overwhelmingly to a connection between media violence and aggressive attitudes, values and behaviors in some children.¹⁴

During his near-death experience, my friend Howard Storm asked the question, “Will the United States be the leader of the world in this change?” He was told, “The United States has been given the opportunity to be the teacher for the world, but much is expected of those to whom much has been given. The United States has been given more of everything than any country in the history of the world, and it has failed to be generous with its gifts. Today the United States is the primary merchant of war and the culture of violence that you export to the world.” During one of his many interviews, he referred to the United States as glorifying a “pornography of violence,” a culture in which killing, cruelty, and suffering are packaged and consumed as entertainment.¹⁵

This focus on violence is unhealthy for human culture and counterproductive to ushering in world peace. One of the repeated messages I encountered during my near-death-experience research was that our thoughts and words have power. People would return from their near-death experiences saying that if they had known how powerful their thoughts and words were, they would have guarded them more carefully.

“The mind is everything. What we think, we become.”

— Buddha

At the time, I did not fully understand what this concept meant. It was only later in my research that I began to understand the power of human consciousness in shaping the reality around us. Human beings are powerful manifesters, as documented in many books such as The Secret, and what we focus on has a profound effect not only on the world we collectively create, but on our own levels of peace and joy.

At the time of writing, I am 60 years old and have never personally witnessed a stabbing, shooting, or murder. It is neither natural nor healthy for human beings to witness such violence on a regular basis. As the Barbaric Age comes to an end, so too will our cultural obsession with violence. Unfortunately, for now, we are still seeing the final gasps of the old energy dragging nations into war.

War

I am not here to make excuses for war or to justify war, but I am definitely not going to glorify war. War is death, disease, destruction, disablement, and a sheer waste of men and women and raw materials. The only people who profit from war are the men who make the munitions and the guns. Nobody wins wars. There are losers on every side.

— World War II Veteran

War is the lowest vibrational expression of human interaction. Violence, killing, and blowing things up is not an effective way to solve problems.

Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that. Hate multiplies hate, violence multiplies violence, and toughness multiplies toughness, in a descending spiral of destruction. The chain reaction of evil must be broken, or we shall be plunged into the dark abyss of annihilation.

— Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

If war were an effective solution to humanity's problems, World War I, often called "the war to end all wars," would have been the last. Instead, it was followed by an even greater and more destructive conflict—World War II. Today, roughly one-sixth of the United States federal budget is devoted to the Department of War, previously and less accurately referred to as the Defense Department.

Had the United States chosen to become the breadbasket of the world rather than its global enforcer, it would not be viewed with such resentment by so many nations, particularly in the Middle East. Yet the reality is that the United States now maintains approximately 1,000 military bases worldwide, including in numerous countries where its presence is neither welcomed nor desired.

War is coming to an end. What we are witnessing today are the final convulsions of an old paradigm of power—leaders clinging desperately to a dying worldview, attempting to drag humanity back into an age of survival consciousness, where domination replaces cooperation and both individuals and nations seek to control and exploit their neighbors through force, fear, and violence. I have watched documentaries showing that, in wars of the past, people often cheered as their leaders declared war on neighboring nations. Today, for the first time in modern history, the majority of people on planet Earth are opposed to war.

The End of An Age

That, in a nutshell, is where humanity stands right now. And, believe it or not, you wanted to be here for it all. You applied to be here to participate in the great shift of consciousness—and you were chosen among countless others who also wanted to incarnate on Earth at the dawn of this Great Awakening, but could not, simply because there were not enough bodies available.

“I think this is the best thing going on anywhere, to be in human form incarnated on Earth at this time.”¹⁶

— Sara Landon, Author, Speaker, and Channeler

According to my near-death experience research, Earth is the most difficult planet in this galaxy in which to incarnate, and one of the three most difficult in the entire universe. Pause and consider what that truly means. There are hundreds of billions of stars in this galaxy alone, many believed to host their own planetary systems. There are hundreds of billions of galaxies beyond that. Among all those worlds—many of them utopian paradises and relatively easy incarnations for less-experienced souls—you are here, on one of the most challenging planets that exists in the entire universe.

I will admit, this was not an easy concept for me to accept. I am an engineer, grounded in a very human, Earth-based way of thinking. Am I really supposed to believe that I am some fearless, thrill-seeking soul who chose this life—this level of difficulty, this amount of struggle? No. I resisted that idea for a long time. And yet, somehow, deep down, I know it is true.

I often must remind myself that being here is a great privilege, even when surviving—and especially thriving—feels overwhelming in this most difficult of environments. So if you are here now, kudos. And if you have had a train wreck of a life, double kudos. That simply means you are one of the more experienced souls who took on a greater challenge.

Remember this: suffering does not mean failure. Just because a life appears broken, unsuccessful, or tragic by earthly standards does not mean it is anything of the sort. Any life lived on Earth, no matter how painful, no matter how misunderstood, is considered a great success story in Heaven.

Everything you have read in this chapter—the corruption, the violence, the cruelty, and the systemic insanity—represents not humanity’s final chapter, but its breaking point. Throughout history, great change has always been preceded by great chaos, and what we are witnessing now is that chaos reaching its peak. The old systems are failing because they can no longer sustain the rising consciousness of this planet. Their collapse is not a tragedy, but rather a beautiful transformation. We are standing at the end of one age and at the beginning of another, where fear gives way to loving awareness, domination yields to cooperation, and the long night of the Barbaric Age is finally coming to an end.

Chapter 2

The Great Awakening

Fortunately, some are born with spiritual immune systems that sooner or later give rejection to the illusory worldview grafted upon them from birth through social conditioning. They begin sensing that something is amiss, and start looking for answers. Inner knowledge and anomalous outer experiences show them a side of reality others are oblivious to, and so begins their journey of awakening. Each step of the journey is made by following the heart instead of following the crowd, and by choosing knowledge over the veils of ignorance.¹⁷

— Henri Bergson

A Catastrophe Avoided

Throughout human history, there have been countless prophecies of doom and gloom predicting the end of the world.

“When pictures seem alive with movements free,
when boats like fish swim beneath the sea,
when men like birds shall scour the sky,
then half the world, deep drenched in blood shall die.”¹⁸

— Mother Shipton, English soothsayer and prophetess, 16th century

“Behold, the Lord will empty the Earth and make it desolate, and he will twist its surface and scatter its inhabitants... the Earth shall be utterly empty and utterly plundered.”

— The Bible, Isaiah 24:1–3 (English Standard Version)

“I don’t know what weapons will be used in World War III, but World War IV will be fought with sticks and stones.”

— Albert Einstein

“We will be destroyed by giant tsunamis, earthquakes, and volcanoes in 2012. There is no way to escape this.”

— Patrick Geryl, author, The Orion Prophecy (2001)

“The world is going to end in 12 years if we don’t address climate change.”

— Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, U.S. Representative (2019)

And at the time, some of those earlier predictions were reasonable. Whenever people or psychics speak about the future, they are always describing the most likely outcome based on the direction humanity appears to be heading at that moment. For thousands of years, we were, in fact, moving toward self-destruction—and those predictions would have been accurate if not for one crucial factor. Free will is the highest law of spirituality, and human beings always retain the right to change their minds—and often do.

In 2012, there was widespread discussion about the world supposedly ending on December 21, 2012, the date marking the end of the Mayan Calendar cycle. News stories included interviews with people who had built underground bunkers and stockpiled years' worth of food in preparation for Armageddon, nuclear war, or whatever catastrophe was believed to be imminent. Yet the Mayan Calendar was not predicting the end of the world, but rather the end of the Barbaric Age and the beginning of an Age of Enlightenment.

Sometime around 1990—thanks to significant help from above, not only from Heaven but also from benevolent extraterrestrial species—humanity changed course, and its destruction was averted. I do not have specific information about any single defining event that caused this shift; however, I strongly suspect it was the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War, thereby eliminating the threat of global nuclear holocaust.

Although it may not feel so today, we have already passed the point of no return and are steadily progressing toward a peaceful, utopian society rooted in love. It will not be like Heaven itself, but compared to today's cultures of greed, domination, and violence, it will feel like Heaven on Earth. I want to state this again clearly, as I have been shown this repeatedly through multiple sources: humanity will not extinguish itself. The spiritual evolution and ascension of human consciousness is an accelerating juggernaut that can no longer be stopped. The game is over. The race has been won. From this point forward, it is only a matter of the plan continuing to unfold.

The End of Consent

It is impossible for a relatively small group of individuals to control the lives of an entire planet of eight billion people without their consent. Such a system can only function through toxic cooperation—between those who seek power and the masses who, often unwittingly, surrender their free will in exchange for promises of safety, protection, security, and the assurance that their needs will be met. This unwritten agreement is the true foundation of control, and it persists only as long as both sides continue to uphold it.

“Resolve to serve no more, and you are at once freed.”
— Étienne de La Boétie, 16th Century French Philosopher

For this arrangement to end, one side must withdraw its participation. History shows that entrenched power rarely relinquishes control voluntarily, nor does it suddenly become benevolent. Real change begins elsewhere. In our case, it will not come from the few who benefit from the existing system, but from the collective realization of the people themselves—those who are suffering under tyranny—when they finally decide they have had enough and quietly, firmly, and unrelentingly begin to revoke their consent. For all tyranny requires is obedience. The moment we refuse to comply; tyranny collapses. And that moment is not coming someday in the distant future. It is unfolding now, in millions who are remembering who they are—and awakening. No force on Earth will compel them to return to sleep.

Darkness Exposed

“Every new means of communication is a new means of exposing the truth.”

— Julian Assange

In the age of the internet and smartphones, just about anyone, including homeless people, can communicate with the rest of the world. For thousands of years, it was easy for powerful global interests to hide nefarious behavior. Today, as independent news outlets and social media channels rise and begin to replace mainstream media long controlled by those in power, the dark behavior of politicians, corporations, bankers, and global elites is increasingly being exposed. In recent years, a growing number of modern-day Robin Hoods of information have dared to pull back the veil on the unethical behavior of governments and organizations worldwide.

Daniel Ellsberg released the Pentagon Papers, proving that U.S. leaders had knowingly lied to the American people for years about the true nature of the Vietnam War. Edward Snowden exposed a vast global surveillance apparatus in which the U.S. National Security Agency and its allies secretly monitored the phone calls and internet activity of millions of people without their knowledge. Julian Assange founded WikiLeaks and published classified military and diplomatic records that revealed civilian killings, covert operations, and systematic government deception. Chelsea Manning leaked U.S. military and diplomatic files that exposed previously hidden civilian deaths and wartime practices deliberately kept from the public. Frances Haugen revealed internal Facebook documents demonstrating that company executives knew their platforms were inflicting widespread social and mental-health damage—and deliberately prioritized profit over the well-being of the public.¹⁹

“There is no instance of a nation benefiting from prolonged secrecy.” — Sun Tzu

As darkness continues to be exposed, a global awakening is underway. More people are recognizing corruption and systemic abuse of power within corporations, governments, and financial systems, and they are no longer willing to accept it. A rising demand for integrity in all forms of leadership—public and private—is growing stronger by the day. This collective call will eventually become a deafening shout of billions, impossible to ignore, and those who cling to power without conscience will be replaced by leaders guided by integrity, compassion, and service to humanity.

Although hundreds of scandals have already surfaced, they represent only the tip of the iceberg. Over the next 50 years, truth will continue to emerge, systems will be reshaped, and a new foundation will be built—one designed to serve the well-being of all people, not just the few in power.

A Balancing of Energy

“A man and a woman are two wings of the same bird. Only together can they fly.”

— Native American proverb

One major contributing factor to the Great Awakening now underway is the rebalancing of.....

Chapter 3

A Quantum Leap

“Anyone who is not shocked by quantum theory has not understood it.”

— Dr. Niels Bohr, Nobel Prize in Physics, 1922

The Fundamental Forces of Nature

According to modern science, the universe is governed by four fundamental forces of nature: the strong nuclear force, the weak nuclear force, gravity, and electromagnetism. These four forces are said to be responsible for all observed interactions in the universe, from the motion of galaxies to the structure of atoms and subatomic particles.

In the 1930s, astronomer Fritz Zwicky was studying a large cluster of galaxies and measuring how fast the galaxies were moving within it. Based on the known laws of physics, there was not enough visible matter to provide the gravitational pull needed to explain their motions. Zwicky concluded that a large amount of unseen matter must be present, creating additional gravity to hold the cluster together. He called this invisible substance dark matter. According to Wikipedia, dark matter is defined as a form of matter that does not interact with light or other electromagnetic radiation, but whose presence is inferred through its gravitational effects on visible matter. It is believed to make up about 27 percent of the universe’s mass-energy content and is thought to be composed of undiscovered subatomic particles.²⁹

According to information from the other side of the veil, there is no such thing as dark matter. Our scientists got that one wrong—another classic case of trying to force a round peg into a square hole. People have difficulty speculating what is unknown, so even the most brilliant scientists make projections based only on what is currently understood. The truth is that there are six fundamental forces of nature. Both gravity and electromagnetism are quantum, multidimensional forces. There are two additional quantum multidimensional energies or forces that humanity has yet to discover, and one or both is responsible for the slower rate of expansion of galaxies.

Things to Come

A knife is an extremely useful tool. It can be used to prepare food, create wood carvings, and can mean the difference between life and death in a survival situation in nature. Yet, as useful as it is, we do not allow two-year-old children to play with knives. They are too immature to handle such a dangerous tool and could easily hurt themselves or others. The same is true of humanity’s current understanding of quantum energy. If humanity had a complete understanding of how to measure, manipulate, and use quantum-based energies, it could be too easily weaponized, and we would most likely harm ourselves. We are not yet ready for such powerful and transformative scientific knowledge.

A species can advance only as far as its level of consciousness allows. When awareness is limited, technology must remain limited as well—this is part of the divine design, much like the safeguards placed around children until they are mature enough to handle powerful tools. Humanity, however, is evolving rapidly. As our consciousness rises, we will be granted the ability to detect, measure, and manipulate quantum energies. When that moment arrives, it will transform civilization as profoundly as the greatest breakthroughs in history—agriculture, electricity, computers, and the internet. We have already taken the very first step by successfully detecting gravitational waves.

Scientists make first direct detection of gravitational waves

By Jennifer Chu, Massachusetts Institute of Technology,
February 11, 2016

Almost 100 years ago today, Albert Einstein predicted the existence of gravitational waves — ripples in the fabric of space-time that are set off by extremely violent, cosmic cataclysms in the early universe. With his knowledge of the universe and the technology available in 1916, Einstein assumed that such ripples would be “vanishingly small” and nearly impossible to detect. The astronomical discoveries and technological advances over the past century have changed those prospects.

Now for the first time, scientists in the LIGO Scientific Collaboration have directly observed the ripples of gravitational waves in an instrument on Earth. In so doing, they have again dramatically confirmed Einstein’s theory of general relativity and opened up a new way in which to view the universe.³⁰

In the future, as our scientists begin to understand and work with quantum energies, one of the first breakthrough advances will greatly improve our ability to communicate—but not with each other. That, we have already mastered.

Friends in High Places

In October 2007, the Allen Telescope Array began operations as the world’s first radio telescope array designed specifically for the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI). Located at the Hat Creek Radio Observatory in northern California, it consists of 42 six-meter dish antennas operating together to scan large areas of the sky across a wide range of radio frequencies, searching for narrowband signals that could indicate the existence of extraterrestrials.

SETI has captivated scientists and UFO enthusiasts alike. Since the mid-20th century, astronomers have scanned the cosmos for signs of alien civilizations, yet have heard only silence. With so many brilliant minds on the case, why have we not found a single definitive sign of life beyond Earth? The simple answer is that radio signals are too slow.

Radio signals travel at the speed of light—about 186,282 miles per second—which is fast enough to circle the Earth over seven times in one second. This speed is more than sufficient for global communication, allowing people to send messages from one side of the planet to the other in a fraction.....

Chapter 4

First Contact

“To my mathematical brain, the numbers alone make thinking about aliens perfectly rational.”

— Stephen Hawking

We Are Not Alone

No matter how hard we try, the human mind cannot truly grasp the vastness of the universe. Even if we set aside all spiritual understanding and look only at what science tells us, the scale is staggering. Our entire Milky Way galaxy—home to more than 300 billion stars—is nothing more than a faint speck of light within the observable universe. Light itself, races at roughly 670 million miles per hour. Yet even at that unimaginable speed, it would take more than 100,000 years to cross our galaxy from one side to the other. To put it another way, you would have to travel nonstop at the speed of light for over a thousand human lifetimes just to traverse the tiny dot of space we call the Milky Way galaxy. And beyond it lie at least 200 billion other galaxies, each containing billions or even trillions of stars. The sheer immensity of creation defies comprehension.

Which leads to an unavoidable conclusion: if humanity were alone, the universe would be absurdly overbuilt. A creation of this magnitude would make no sense if it existed for only one small species on one tiny planet. In the very first near-death experience I encountered from Howard Storm, while he was in Heaven, he asked a simple question: “Are we alone in the universe?” The response he received is echoed repeatedly across many near-death accounts. The universe is full of intelligent life, and there are countless other dimensions, each containing universes of their own, also teeming with life. We are not alone. We never have been.

Among the millions of intelligent species in our galaxy, roughly 95 percent are neutral or benevolent, while the other 5 percent act in antagonistic and self-serving ways. These lower-consciousness civilizations possess limited technological power, yet they can still create disruption and cause harm. In response, the benevolent species formed a cooperative alliance to keep them contained and prevent harm from spreading.

I began hearing accounts of a Galactic Federation, a Prime Directive, and technologies such as energy to matter replicators and transporter technology. When I first encountered these ideas, I dismissed them outright as absurd. I remember thinking, Seriously? They haven't even made up a good set of lies. They are just mimicking Star Trek. But over the last 18 years, I have learned a humbling lesson: the fact that something sounds unbelievable does not mean it is untrue. Reality, especially at the cosmic level, is often.....

Chapter 5

Peace on Earth

“If we have no peace, it is because we have forgotten that we belong to each other.”

— Mother Teresa

For as long as human history has been recorded, there has been war. From the earliest clay tablets of ancient civilizations to the chronicles of empires long fallen, humanity’s story has been written in blood, conquest, and conflict. Many have concluded that war is simply part of our nature—that humans are destined to fight one another forever. If human consciousness were static, this might be true. But human consciousness is evolving.

Earth has long existed within a fear-based energetic framework—a duality of fear and love in which fear has dominated for millennia. In such a world, leaders who sought to govern through compassion, cooperation, and peace could rarely hold power, because the collective consciousness was not yet able to sustain those higher ideals. But something profound has changed.

Today, the vast majority of people do not want war. What we are witnessing now is not the continuation of humanity’s true nature, but the dying echo of an old energetic system—one rooted in fear, control, and separation. That system is losing its grip because humanity is awakening to the realization that it no longer serves our highest good. The conflicts we have today are not the future. They are the final convulsions of an old energy that is passing away.

Peace on Earth will be achieved, but it will not come gracefully. Those who thrive on domination and control will not surrender their power willingly. As their grip weakens, they resist all the more fiercely, unwittingly accelerating their own eventual demise. Even as the outcome becomes undeniable, the forces of darkness will struggle desperately, clinging to a world that is already slipping beyond their control.

War will come to an end through a variety of forces; the rebalancing of male and female energy, the recognizing of our common and literal energetic connection, the older generation dying off, and the most difficult way to learn a lesson, through pain and suffering.

Hard Lessons

In teaching us our lessons, the way the universe works is always starting with the most subtle ways to influence our behavior, and if we ignore the lesson, we are put through increasingly more dramatic situations until we finally make the necessary change for.....

Chapter 6

Cleaning Up

“Because we all share this planet Earth, we have to learn to live in peace and harmony with each other and with nature. That is not just a dream, but a necessity.”

— The Dalai Lama

Human beings are the most advanced form of life on planet Earth, and with that status comes a profound responsibility: to serve as stewards and caretakers of the Earth and all its inhabitants—plants, animals, and ecosystems alike. Yet for thousands of years, humanity has largely failed in this duty. Instead of living in harmony with nature, we have exploited it, treating the natural world as a commodity to be consumed for profit, a mindset reflected in the commonly used phrase “natural resources.”

In recent decades, however, a shift has begun. The first Earth Day in 1970 marked a turning point in global awareness, and since then, large-scale, worldwide efforts have emerged to protect ecosystems, promote sustainability, and extend greater compassion toward animals. As humanity’s collective consciousness continues to rise, environmental stewardship will become a deeply held moral value—almost a form of secular religion. In the future, humanity will devote unprecedented effort to healing the planet and repairing the damage caused by centuries of neglect.

A History of Extinctions

“If we can teach ourselves to value the lives of animals, the extinction crisis becomes a human crisis—and therefore solvable.”

— Jane Goodall

Over 99% of all species that have ever lived on planet Earth have gone extinct, with Mother Earth itself responsible for the vast majority of those losses. These extinctions have occurred through natural processes such as climate change, ice ages, massive volcanic eruptions, shifting sea levels, disease, and the continual evolution of new species replacing the old. Such extinctions are a normal and necessary part of the natural world and, over time, are healthy for the planet. Human beings, while responsible for a relatively small percentage of total extinctions, represent an unnatural acceleration of this process—one that humanity will eventually outgrow as it relinquishes its destructive role and.....

Chapter 7

The New Earth

If we want to change the world, it has to start with self. Fear, anger, hatred, condemnation—dictating what other people should be... that's the world we've got. That's the prison. But paradise is waiting. It's a thought, an attitude, away. If we love each other and love the world, our lives are fundamentally changed, and the world is fundamentally changed. And we are the generation, strange as it may seem when you survey the world today, who are going to love the world into the paradise it really should be and was always designed to be.⁵²

— David Icke

A Transition Unknown

Throughout my research, I have encountered many testimonies describing the New Earth and the new world of love that is coming. However, I do not claim to possess a complete or authoritative timeline for how this transformation will unfold, or in what precise order the changes discussed in the previous chapters will occur. What remains elusive is a clear, step-by-step picture of how the transition itself will take place.

Even when insights come from gifted psychics, trusted spiritual channelers, or near-death experiencers who glimpse the future, those futures are not fixed. They can, and often do change in response to humanity's collective choices and free will. History is filled with prophecies that came to pass, as well as many others that did not.

Still, based on current global conditions and the trajectory we appear to be on, we can begin to speculate—not as a declaration of certainty, but as a reflection on recurring themes found across numerous testimonies. In multiple near-death experience accounts, future visions have included events such as:

- The division of the United States into two separate nations without a civil war
- Long-term population decline, largely attributable to reduced birth rates
- A shift in the Earth's magnetic poles
- A dramatic increase in the cost of food
- The emergence of Africa as a global and economic superpower

These accounts do not present a single, fixed future, but rather a range of possible outcomes shaped by the choices humanity makes in the present.

Some of these future predictions may feel unsettling at first. But the most important thing is not to fear change. The prevailing view is that relative global stability will likely continue through about the year 2060, which means that many of the shifts we discuss are still far off in the future.

And even for those who may live to see times of turbulence, it is essential to remember this: history shows us that participation in chaos is a choice. World War II devastated much of Europe—yet there were isolated pockets that remained virtually untouched. In remote regions of Switzerland, Austria, and Italy, small independent communities experienced no bombings, no military occupation, no forced evacuations, and no widespread food shortages. While the world around them burned, their lives continued in peace, relatively unchanged.

Human beings are powerful manifesters of their own destinies. What we consistently focus on, feel, and believe shapes the reality we experience. If you hold the intention, “It is my intention to experience an abundance of joy, stability, peace, loving relationships, and financial well-being,” and you express gratitude as if these qualities already exist, then those outcomes naturally begin to take form. We are not here to fear the future. We are here to create it.

Secrets Revealed

“The very word secrecy is repugnant in a free and open society.”
— President John F. Kennedy, 1961

For most of humanity’s history, it was easy for Globalists and those in power to maintain secrecy about their nefarious activities and goals. In a world where even the poor and 3rd world countries have Internet access, secrets can no longer be hidden as is evidenced the many whistle blowers who have come forward. As the hidden becomes known, there are going to be some shocking revelations.

One of the first major shifts that will occur—likely within the next few years—will be the public admission by governments around the world that they have long been aware of extraterrestrial visitations spanning decades. It will further be revealed that select world leaders, including several U.S. presidents, were granted brief, highly classified encounters aboard extraterrestrial spacecraft. These events, hidden from public record, were part of a broader effort to manage disclosure while preventing mass panic.

It will also be revealed that certain governments secretly recovered and reverse-engineered advanced technologies from crashed extraterrestrial spacecrafts, withholding this knowledge from the public for generations. Some of the technologies derived from these encounters are already embedded in our modern world. Technologies such as Kevlar, fiber optics, and micro-circuitry are believed by many to have originated from this hidden exchange.

To maintain the illusion that these breakthroughs were purely human inventions, individuals with access to this knowledge were covertly placed into strategic positions within aerospace, defense, and high-technology industries. Their role was to release these innovations gradually, making them appear as natural progress—when in truth, humanity was never working alone.

Many conspiracy theories—dismissed today as wild fantasies that could never be true—will ultimately be revealed as accurate.

Even now, we can see unmistakable signs of corruption and hidden agendas within politics, business, and finance. Yet what is visible today represents only a small fraction of what will eventually come to light. What we are witnessing is merely the tip of the iceberg.

If the full scope of these hidden nefarious activities were suddenly exposed, the collective outrage would be so overwhelming that it would trigger global unrest, riots, and the immediate collapse of many of the institutions we currently rely upon. Because such chaos would not serve humanity's highest good, these hidden truths will be disclosed gradually. Each revelation will be carefully processed, examined, and resolved.

As this transformation unfolds, any government, business, financial institution, or organization that refuses to act with integrity and compassion will either be compelled to change or will cease to exist. And slowly, over time, the age of secrecy will come to an end—replaced by a new era of transparency, honesty, and trust.

Living Longer

In the future, a strange and puzzling pattern will begin to emerge—one that will leave much of medical science searching for answers. Some people will continue to live to roughly 80 years of age, while others will begin to live far longer, even reaching 120 years or more. At first, no clear explanation will seem to fit. But the truth, in essence, is simple: fear and chronic anxiety accelerate the body's decline, while sustained states of peace and joy slow the aging process.

Those who learn to live in a higher state of consciousness accompanied by a higher vibrational frequency, will experience a dramatic deceleration of aging. Their bodies will remain vital for far longer, allowing them to live extended, healthier lives.

As a natural consequence, those who remain trapped in lower states of fear and separation will spend less time on the planet, while those aligned with compassion, harmony, and awareness will remain longer. This phenomenon will accelerate humanity's rise to become an ascended species.

Globalism to Independence

“When decisions are made far from the people they affect, democracy becomes an illusion.”

— Noam Chomsky

As these changes unfold, humanity will also begin to move away from the current culture of globalism—traditionally defined as the worldwide exchange of ideas, capital, and goods made possible by modern communication and transportation technologies.

Globalism has delivered undeniable benefits. It has expanded international trade, allowed businesses to access resources and labor at lower costs, and given consumers access to affordable goods on an unprecedented scale. It has also enabled workers and farmers in poorer nations to reach global markets that were once closed to them.

Yet this same system has revealed a hidden fragility. When the world becomes too interconnected and centralized, disruption in one region can ripple instantly across

Endnotes

1. 2012 Crossing Over: A New Beginning, directed by Amel Tresjic (2014, Brave Archer Films), YouTube, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yY36aila8Ho>
2. "R. Buckminster Fuller Quotes," BrainyQuote, accessed August 2, 2025, https://www.brainyquote.com/quotes/r_buckminster_fuller_100112
3. "Zig Ziglar Quotes," BrainyQuote, accessed February 2, 2026, https://www.brainyquote.com/quotes/zig_ziglar_617848
4. Next Level Soul, "ANGRY Atheist & Addict DIES; Shocked By WHO She Saw in Heaven," YouTube, April 1, 2025, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PH8JSAHA_L0
5. Kesh, "Kryon | Eternal Power," YouTube, June 13, 2025, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DGg8z11b8wg>
6. "Henry Ford - People don't understand the banking system," Quotes on Finance, <https://quotesonfinance.com/quote/21/henry-ford-people-dont-understand-the-banking-system>
7. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, "Clinical Considerations: Myocarditis after COVID-19 Vaccines," <https://www.cdc.gov/vaccines/covid-19/clinical-considerations/myocarditis.html>
8. Newser Editors, "Average Size of US Homes, Decade by Decade," newser, May 29, 2016, <https://www.newser.com/story/225645/average-size-of-us-homes-decade-by-decade.html>
9. Natural News Editor, "Have you ever felt like the government doesn't really care what you think?" Natural News, March 2, 2016, https://www.naturalnews.com/053156_political_corruption_American_democracy_representative_government.html
10. Richard Hall & Eric Garcia, "Dozens of Congress members outperformed the stock market in 2024. Here's who gained the most - and why," Independent, January 13, 2025, <https://www.independent.co.uk/news/world/americas/us-politics/congress-stock-trading-nancy-pelosi-b2678752.html>
11. Test Tube News, "Who Owns the Media," September 2018, <https://www.youtube.com/@Timcast/videos>
12. Kryon, "Are the Messiahs Really Coming Back? – Kryon Channeling," Kryon Lee Carroll, April 22, 2025, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XufvGLNiB3k>
13. NASA Earth Observatory, "Climate Change," <https://earthobservatory.nasa.gov>
14. Mary Muscari, "Media violence: advice for parents," Pub Med, December 2002, <https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/12593343>

15. Howard Storm, My Descent Into Death (DoubleDay, March 2005), Hardcover, page 47
16. Every Soul Knows: The Joy of Remembering Who We Really Are, directed by Peter Alessandria (2024: Mindful Entertainment), <https://www.eversoulknows.com>
17. Henri Bergson Quotes, Goodreads, <https://www.goodreads.com/quotes/875145-fortunately-some-are-born-with-spiritual-immune-systems-that-sooner>
18. Ellie Crystal, Mother Shipton's Prophecies, Crystalinks, accessed July 29, 2025 https://www.crystalinks.com/mother_shipton.html
19. Edward Snowden, Julian Assange, Chelsea Manning, Daniel Ellsberg, and Frances Haugen, Disclosures on Government Surveillance, War Conduct, State Secrecy, and Social Media Practices, various years; includes reporting in The New York Times, The Guardian, and The Washington Post.
20. ABC News, "Jury Rules Against Radio Station After Water-Drinking Contest Kills Calif. Mom," November 1, 2009. <https://abcnews.go.com/GMA/jury-rules-radio-station-jennifer-strange-water-drinking/story?id=8970712>
21. Richard Winfield Board and System Advisor, "Beyond Capitalism-as-Usual: What Mondragon Offers to Business Leaders Today," LinkedIn, May 16, 2025, <https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/beyond-capitalism-as-usual-what-mondragon-offers-richard-wytze>
22. Facts and Figures, "Cooperatives are not a marginal phenomenon," International Cooperative Alliance, <https://ica.coop/en/cooperatives/facts-and-figures>
23. Eckhart Tolle, A New Earth: Awakening to Your Life's Purpose (Viking Press, 2005)
24. "Spirituality Among Americans," Pew Research Center, December 7, 2023, <https://www.pewresearch.org/religion/2023/12/07/spirituality-among-americans/>
25. Bob Phillips, "Children Who Remember Past Lives: Astonishing Stories and What They Teach Us," Medium, December 5, 2025, <https://medium.com/spiritual-not-religious/children-who-remember-past-lives-astonishing-stories-and-what-they-teach-us-efbe16822b26>
26. Kryon, "Is Being Too Sensitive a Curse?" Kryon Lee Carroll, November 4, 2025, https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jhK_WUvOufk
27. Gaia Staff, "The Sphinx Hall of Records: Truth or Tall Tale?" Gaia, December 26, 2019, <https://www.gaia.com/article/sphinx-hall-records-truth-or-tall-tale>
28. "Why Is Bhutan Considered the Happiest Country?" Bhutan Travelog, June 16, 2025, <https://bhutantravelog.com/travel-guide/why-is-bhutan-considered-the-happiest-country>
29. Wikipedia, "Dark Matter," https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dark_matter
30. Jennifer Chu, "Scientists make first direct detection of gravitational waves," Massachusetts Institute of Technology, February 11, 2016, <https://news.mit.edu/2016/ligo-first-detection-gravitational-waves-0211>

31. Andreas Muller, "What is quantum entanglement? A physicist explains Einstein's 'spooky action at a distance'" Astronomy, October 7, 2022, <https://www.astronomy.com/science/what-is-quantum-entanglement-a-physicist-explains-einsteins-spooky-action-at-a-distance/>
32. Homa, "Are Fairies Real? A Deep Dive Into the Mythical Creatures," Globemark, December 8, 2024, <https://globemark.com/are-fairies-real-a-deep-dive-into-the-mythical-creatures/>
33. I AM, directed by Tom Shadyac (2010, Flying Eye Productions) Amazon Prime Video
34. Neha Reddy, "Understanding Quantum Generators: Principles and Implications," Biolecta, accessed February 2, 2026, <https://biolecta.com/articles/understanding-quantum-generators-principles-implications/>
35. Ran When Parked, "Car with No Side Mirrors: The Future of Automotive Design," April 25, 2025, <https://ranwhenparked.net/car-with-no-side-mirrors/>
36. "1 in 4 people globally still lack access to safe drinking water – WHO, UNICEF," World Health Organization, August 26, 2025, <https://www.who.int/news/item/26-08-2025-1-in-4-people-globally-still-lack-access-to-safe-drinking-water---who--unicef>
37. Muhammad Tuhin, "The Rise of Quantum Computing: What You Need to Know," Science News Today, April 20, 2025, <https://www.sciencenewstoday.org/the-rise-of-quantum-computing-what-you-need-to-know>
38. Andrew May, "What is the Big Bang Theory?" Space.com, January 29, 2025, <https://www.space.com/25126-big-bang-theory.html>
39. "The Prime Directive—Galactic Federation of Worlds," ExoPolitics, <https://exopolitics.org/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/Prime-Directive.pdf>
40. "U.S. Military Spending/Defense Budget," MacroTrends, 2023, <https://www.macrotrends.net/global-metrics/countries/usa/united-states/military-spending-defense-budget>
41. "Trends in World Military Expenditure, 2024," Sipri, April 2025, <https://www.sipri.org/publications/2025/sipri-fact-sheets/trends-world-military-expenditure-2024>
42. "Is the world less violent today than in the past?" Getting Better Foundation, September 19, 2025, <https://gettingbetterfoundation.org/kb/is-the-world-less-violent-today-than-in-the-past/>
43. "The Unexpected Decline of Violence: Why the World is Getting Safer—and What It Means for the Future," Archde, <https://www.archyde.com/declining-violence-why-the-world-is-safer-than-you-think/>
44. McKinley Corbley, "Former Gang Leaders Embrace Peace So They Can Stop the Violence and Be Better Role Models," Good News Network, September 25, 2019, <https://www.goodnewsnetwork.org/former-bloods-and-crips-leaders-make-peace-to-stop-gang-violence>

45. CBS Evening News, "Ohio 7-Eleven owner confronts thief with kindness," YouTube, April 10, 2019, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cyhLeu0hcyE>
46. Patrick Pester, "How many animal species have humans driven to extinction?" Live Science, July 21, 2024, <https://www.livescience.com/animals/how-many-animal-species-have-humans-driven-to-extinction>
47. Katie Peek, "Global Population Growth Is Slowing Down. Here's One Reason Why," Sci Am, December 7, 2022, <https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/global-population-growth-is-slowing-down-heres-one-reason-why>
48. Brian Bateman, "The Rise of Plant-Based Diets: Why More People are Going Vegan and Vegetarian," Cyrus Ramsey, February 17, 2023, <https://cyrusramsey.com/the-rise-of-plant-based-diets-why-more-people-are-going-vegan-and-vegetarian/>
49. "50 Years Ago, This Was A Waste Land. Until One Man Transformed It By Applying Nature's Wisdom," Bright Vibes, accessed January 14, 2026, <https://www.brightvibes.com/50-years-ago-this-was-a-waste-land-until-one-man-transformed-it-by-applying-natures-wisdom/>
50. "Plastic Degradation Time: How Long Does Plastic Last?" Biology Insights, July 26, 2025, <https://biologyinsights.com/plastic-degradation-time-how-long-does-plastic-last>
51. Earthava Editorial Team, "What is the Great Pacific Garbage Patch? Causes, Location, and Impact," Earthava, January 1, 2026, https://www.earthava.com/what-is-the-great-pacific-garbage-patch/#1_What_is_the_Great_Pacific_Garbage_Patch
52. Jennifer McDermott and Michael Hill, "Earth Day: How one grocery shopper takes steps to avoid 'pointless plastic'," April 21, 2024, <https://apnews.com/article/earth-day-plastics-grocery-shopping-f112aadca284325bf0e8e5adfba65f40>
53. 2012 Crossing Over: A New Beginning, directed by Amel Tresjic (2014, Brave Archer Films), YouTube, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yY36aila8Ho>
54. Passengers, directed by Morten Tyldum, (2016; Columbia Pictures), HBO Max

Bibliography

1. Griffin, Edward. The Creature from Jekyll Island: A Second Look at the Federal Reserve. Westlake Village, CA: American Media, 1994
2. Suich, David. God Took My Clothes. 2nd ed. Jacksonville, TX: Kindle Direct Publishing, 2024.
3. Strobel, Lee Patrick. Reckless Homicide?: Ford's Pinto Trial. New York: Grossman Publishers, 1980.
4. Andreason, Christian. "We Are Vibrational Beings." Unpublished manuscript, n.d.
5. Icke, David. The Road Map: Escaping the Maze of Madness. London: David Icke Books, 2025.
6. Vanier, Jean. From Brokenness to Community. New York: Paulist Press, 1992.
7. Smith, Jeffrey M. Seeds of Deception: Exposing Industry and Government Lies About the Safety of the Genetically Engineered Foods You're Eating. Fairfield, IA: Yes! Books, 2003.
8. Shiva, Vandana. Oneness vs. the 1%: Shattering Illusions, Seeding Freedom. White River Junction, VT: Chelsea Green Publishing, 2018.
9. Shiva, Vandana. Earth Democracy: Justice, Sustainability, and Peace. Cambridge, MA: South End Press, 2005.
10. Geryl, Patrick. The Orion Prophecy. Kempen, Germany: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2001.
11. Benedict, Mellen-Thomas. Journey Through the Light and Back. Carlsbad, CA: Hay House, 2009.
12. Ritchie, George G. Return from Tomorrow. Charlottesville, VA: Hampton Roads Publishing, 2023.
13. Storm, Howard. My Descent into Death. New York: Doubleday, 2005.
14. Tzu, Sun. The Art of War. Translated by Thomas Cleary. Boston: Shambhala, 2005.
15. Hawking, Stephen. A Brief History of Time: From the Big Bang to Black Holes. New York: Bantam Books, 1988.
16. Byrne, Rhonda. The Secret. New York: Atria Books, 2006.
17. Dyer, Wayne W. The Power of Intention: Learning to Co-create Your World Your Way. Carlsbad, CA: Hay House, 2004.
18. Cameron, Kathleen, and Andrea Cox. Gratitude for Manifestation. New York: Atria Books, 2021.
19. Perry, Melissa Gates. Being Humans: Rights and Responsibilities in an Age of Algorithms. New York: Columbia University Press, 2023.

20. Barasch, Marc. Field Notes on the Compassionate Life: A Search for the Soul of Kindness. New York: Rodale Books, 2005.
21. Lucado, Max. Just Like Jesus. Nashville, TN: Word Publishing, 1998.
22. Eadie, Betty J. Embraced by the Light. Placerville, CA: Gold Leaf Press, 1992.
23. Aziz, Shajen Joy. Discover the Gift: It's Already Within You. Carlsbad, CA: Hay House, 2012.
24. Danaan, Elena. A Gift from the Stars: Alien Races. United Kingdom: O.H. Kruse Publishing, 2021.
25. Piper, Don, with Cecil Murphey. 90 Minutes in Heaven: A True Story of Death and Life. Grand Rapids, MI: Revell, 2004.
26. Jordan, Kathie. The Birth Called Death. New York: iUniverse, 2008.
27. King, Moray B. Tapping the Zero Point Energy. Kempton, IL: Adventures Unlimited Press, 2006.
28. Gawain, Shakti. Creative Visualization: Use the Power of Your Imagination to Create What You Want in Your Life. New York: Bantam Books, 2002.
29. Eadie, Betty J., with Curtis Taylor. The Heart Awakening: A Journey of Self-Discovery. New York: Ballantine Books, 1996.
30. Wood, Gary, with David Stoop. A Place Called Heaven: 10 Surprising Truths About Your Eternal Home. Nashville, TN: Thomas Nelson, 1998.
31. Brinkley, Dannion, with Paul Perry. Saved by the Light: The True Story of a Man Who Died Twice and the Profound Revelations He Received. New York: Villard Books, 1994.
32. Moody, Raymond A., Jr. Life After Life: The Investigation of a Phenomenon—Survival of Bodily Death. New York: Bantam Books, 1975.
33. Rives, Kim. My Walk Through Heaven. Bloomington, IN: WestBow Press, 2016.
34. Brinkley, Dannion, with Kathryn Brinkley. At Peace in the Light: What I Learned on the Other Side of Death. New York: Hyperion, 1997.
35. McTaggart, Lynne. The Field: The Quest for the Secret Force of the Universe. New York: HarperCollins, 2001.
36. Lockett, Mary Ann. An Answer from Heaven. Bloomington, IN: WestBow Press, 2014.
37. Kent, Richard. The Final Frontier: Exploring the Afterlife and Transforming Our Fear of Death. New York: New World Library, 2001.
38. Kübler-Ross, Elisabeth. On Life After Death. Berkeley, CA: Celestial Arts, 1997.

39. Fenimore, Angie. Beyond the Darkness: A True Story of Death, Miracles, and Hope. Carlsbad, CA: Hay House, 2013.
40. The Living Bible. Wheaton, IL: Tyndale House Publishers, 2007.
41. The Holy Bible: New American Standard Bible, 2020. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 2020.
42. The Holy Bible: English Standard Version. Wheaton, IL: Crossway, 2016.
43. The Holy Bible: King James Version. New York: Oxford University Press, 2008.
44. To Hell and Back. Directed by Maurice S. Rawlings. United States: Eternal Productions, 2006. Streaming video.
45. I Am. Directed by Tom Shadyac. United States: Shady Acres Entertainment, 2010. Streaming video.
46. The Lottery of Birth. Directed by Raoul Martinez. United Kingdom: Raoul Martinez Productions, 2018. Streaming video.
47. 2012: Crossing Over—A New Beginning. Directed by Mario Nassi. United States: Brave Archer Films, 2012. Film.
48. Discover the Gift. Directed by Demian Lichtenstein. United States: Moving Art Productions, 2012. Streaming video.
49. Spirit Channelers in America. Directed by Jon Jost. United States: Independent production, 2007. Documentary film.
50. Pleiadian Agenda – Time For Truth. YouTube video, 1:11:45. Uploaded by Time for Truth, June 14, 2016. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rzC3twHRKHW>
51. Billy Meier: The Pleiadian Connection: Presented by Randolph Winters. YouTube video, 50:36. Uploaded by Randolph Winters, March 3, 2011. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=H0HcsOBGOFU4>
52. Pleiadian Agenda – Time For Truth. YouTube video, 1:11:45. Uploaded by Time for Truth, June 14, 2016. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rzC3twHRKHW>
53. New Experiments Show Consciousness Affects Matter ~ Dean Radin, PhD. YouTube video. Uploaded by Institute of Noetic Sciences, August 29, 2019. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nRSBaq3vAeY>
54. How 5 Mega-Corporations Control Everything You Watch. YouTube video, 17:47 (approx). * Uploaded by Viewpoint Media, November 16, 2019. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cXSYPzoeTvY>
55. Planned Obsolescence: The Lightbulb Conspiracy. YouTube video. Uploaded by Sustainable Human, January 11, 2017. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zwi0z4xQMxk>
56. The Great Awakening Documentary Just Released. YouTube video. Uploaded by New Era, June 3, 2023. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1fDWZjvNUC8>

57. How to Green the World's Deserts and Reverse Climate Change. YouTube video, 22:19 (approx).* Uploaded by TEDTalksDirector, March 6, 2013. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vpTHi7O66pI>
58. Planet of the Humans. Directed by Jeff Gibbs. United States: Rumble Media and YouTube, 2019. Documentary film.
59. Regenerative Agriculture on a Small Scale | What It Looks Like. YouTube video. Uploaded by No-Till Growers (Jesse Cool), date unknown. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ct3CL22RpTg>
60. The World's Largest Garbage Patch: A Hidden Environmental Crisis. YouTube video. Uploaded by Top Fives, January 25, 2020 (approx).* https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1_RGn2NKhQg
61. Vandana Shiva: Earth Democracy at PCC. YouTube video. Uploaded by Portland Community College, August 28, 2019. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vkldmWDOjUI>
62. I.O.U.S.A. YouTube video. Uploaded by IOUSATheMovie (the official channel for the documentary), year approx. 2015. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BVvdTYSMVRQ>
63. Money as Debt – Full Documentary. YouTube video. Uploaded by Free Your Mind, August 26, 2006. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4AC6RSau7r8>
64. The Biggest Scam In The History Of Mankind – Hidden Secrets of Money Ep 4. YouTube video. Uploaded by GoldSilver (w/ Mike Maloney), November 23, 2018. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iFDe5kUUyTO>
65. The Money Fix – A Documentary for Monetary Reform. YouTube video. Uploaded by We Are Change, January 16, 2017. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TwmM5Nb6hiE>
66. Marciniak, Barbara. Messages from the Pleiadians: A Channeling with an Arcturian.... San Rafael, CA: Earthdancer Books, 1992.
67. Great Human Potential: Walking in One's Own Light – Teaching from the Ninth Dimensional Pleiadians and the Hathors by Wendy Kennedy and Tom Kenyon.
68. Oswald, Lisa. The Pleiadian Channeling Guide to Awake Energy and the Unique Side of Infinity: The Transmissions of Pleiadian Great Light Channel, Book 1. Ashland, OR: Project Lightbody, 2024.
69. Hicks, Esther, and Jerry Hicks. Ask and It Is Given: Learning to Manifest Your Desires. Carlsbad, CA: Hay House, 2004.
70. Carroll, Lee. Kryon: The Official Website of Kryon Channeled by Lee Carroll. Accessed February 3, 2026. <https://www.kryon.com>
71. Anka, Darryl. Bashar Official Website. <https://www.bashar.org>
72. Amora Quan Yin. Love Has Won Official Website. <http://www.lovehaswon.org>
73. Day, Christine. Christine Day Online: Pleiadian Initiations of Light. <https://www.christinedayonline.com>

74. Royal, Lyssa. LyssaRoyal.net. <https://www.lyssaroyal.net>

75. Danaan, Elena. Elena Danaan – Author & Contactee Website. <https://www.elenadanaan.org>

76. Ward, Suzy. MatthewBooks.com – The Story Behind the Books. Accessed February 3, 2026.
<https://www.matthewbooks.com>

Editorial Assistance and AI Disclosure: The author received editorial assistance from ChatGPT, an AI-based language model developed by OpenAI, in the preparation of this book. This assistance included help with content summaries, grammar, clarity, sentence structure, organization, stylistic editing, selected statistical context, limited factual verification, and collaborative support in the design and refinement of the book cover. All ideas, interpretations, viewpoints, and meanings expressed in this work are solely those of the author. ChatGPT did not originate the content, arguments, or conclusions, but served only as an editorial, organizational, and research support tool.